Table of Contents

2 Do you plan to release free and open version?

Promotional distribution of the completely free Entry version was finished on 31.01.2014

It is almost free now 😉 We do not get any income from installations of the Entry version. (The price equals to costs: documents' flow + logistics + dealer's commission + support and development of this functionality).
However the operator's income over investments into our commercial version can be as high as 1000% in a year (for 2 years term). Sure you have to buy the hardware - same way as with our free version. This hardware is a general purpose computer. It is easy to sell out or to use for other applications.

The network card driver's license fee can be an additional cost. This fee is collected by another company. If you use Silicom network adapters this license is typically free or is included into HW price (please check with a dealer or manufacturer). This is the best choice if you need Bypass functionality.

Nevertheless we plan to develop own drivers and distribute them free of charge in order to reduce your initial investments.

Next, we plan to open upgrades of our platform to external developers.